Task 7:

If someone hates living in the big city, there could be many reasons.

Some people do not like the constant noise of the streets, or the polluted air is a problem for them. There are many benefits in living in a large city, yes, but nothing beats the fresh air of the countryside, the friendly neighbours. There are many other reasons for moving out of the big city, but I think that the one of the friend is ~~a very good one~~.

Task 8:

The Internet is a very useful tool. But are teens spending too much time on social networks?

Social networks are a big part of a teenager's life. The given diagram shows that 73% of teenagers are on social networks and 22% of teenagers log on to Facebook over 10 times per day. That is a lot of time spent on social networks. And those numbers will probably increase.

The downside of teens spending so much time on social networks is that they stop getting exercise, and can become lazy couch potatoes. That includes not just teenagers, but also kids. 25% of all Facebook users are under the age of 10.

The upside is that you can make a lot more friends on social networks than ~~x~~ if you just went outside. The average teen has 201 Facebook friends, which is shown in the pie chart.

In conclusion, I think that if you spend time wisely, social networks can be ~~x~~ a very good tools for teenagers. But ~~if~~ we should not overuse them. If we do, then they can become harmful.
