Task 7.

There may be various reasons for hating the life in a big city. For example, it can be the high pollution level that may bother. Another reason can possibly be the rush of big cities which may be uncomfortable. Also "megapolis" dwellers often complain about that everything is overpriced. In addition, traffic jams are a usual occasion in big cities, which makes it way more difficult to get to work or a shopping centre. Big cities, as anything else, have advantages and disadvantages.

Task 2.

Nowadays social networks are becoming more and more widespread, especially among younger generations. That makes them an interesting and even crucial topic for investigation and analysis.

Based on the provided pie chart it is possible to gather facts and make hypotheses. As 73% of teens are on social networks ~~it seems~~ to be a popular way of communication. 37% of teens send messages to friends on a ~~daily~~ daily basis, and 22% log on to Facebook over 10 times a day! No wonder why a person needs so much time for online communication, because an average teen has 201 Facebook friends!

As technologies develop, the time spent by the screen and the number of online friendships is expected to grow. Even now 25% of Facebook ~~the~~ users are younger than 10, which means that young ~~to~~ people are already socialising through computers. It is most likely impossible to prevent but parents have to consider their children's health which may be ~~damage~~ damaged by the screen.

To conclude, social networks are popular among young people and are becoming a crucial part of socialization. It is ~~not bad~~ but controversial as it is dangerous for health.
