Task 1. 1) Mr. Gupta showed Rohan an hourglass and told him that it represents time. To be more specific, he told him that every grain of sand is a moment in life. Every single grain that falls is like a wasted opportunity caused by procrastination.

2) Rohan began changing his life based on Mr. Gupta's advice of taking small steps. He started setting goals, completing them one by one. He also made sure to organise and plan his day, which helped him learn to manage his time. Rohan also found limiting distractions very effective.

3) As a result of his newfound dedication, Rohan accomplished many things, such as graduating. He finally completed many tasks, that he had been putting off for years.

4) As Rohan grew older, he came to the realization that time indeed is a limited resource and he wanted to make the most of it. He learned to nurture relationships and to especially value quality time spent with loved ones. With the power of time, you can accomplish many things, which won't happen if you keep being lazy. It's important to process ~~and really get to understand~~ the importance of time and start using it wisely.

5) As the story about a lazy little boy and how he managed to turn his life around, thanks to a wise man spread, he was honored by his village as he grew old. People were shocked of how quickly Rohan got himself together. They were very proud.

6) The impact of Rohan's story on the younger generation was astonishing. Many kids that were just like little Rohan started to figure out just how important time really is.

4) According to the text, the person that mainly played the 'pivotal role' was Mr. Gupta. Only then, thanks to him, Rohan could make an impact on the transformation of the ~~village~~ village. It was Mr. Gupta's knowledge that he was passing on, after all.

8) The key message that Rohan shared with the younger generation is that time needs to be cherished. It flies by very fast and the sooner you figure that out, the more time you will be able to save.

9) Rohan's story managed to motivate people. It regained their spark to do things that they have been putting off. You will never get back the time you missed and later regret every second that you spent not caring about it and being lazy.

10) People started to perceive the concept of time with consideration. Rohan's story changed lives. People started to perceive it as something very limited and important.

Task 4

She could give multiple reasons. For instance, it isn't as accessible as ~~the~~ city. You don't have many stores or shops, you don't have workers that could clean your lawns. The countryside often has little to no internet ~~com~~ connection. Even if it does, it's not stable, making it hard for people to work from home. In the city many things are automated, ~~but in the countryside~~ which in the countryside you have to do yourself. Also you have a hazard of wild animals roaming around and bad roads.

Task 8.

In modern days, kids now prefer to spend most of their time using technology. If we look closely at the diagram, we see that ~~th~~ 10% of their day they spend being online, 10% playing videogames and also 10% texting on their phones. But that's not all. 10% of their time they also spend on playing sports. Then we notice how they don't completely waste their time while being online because 15% they spend on doing their homework. 15% of the time in their ~~the~~ day is spent on eating. But most of all time consists of sleeping, reaching 30%. Overall their day is pretty balanced. They are being productive and healthy, while also spending time on rest. I think that this is a pretty precise diagram, although others could disagree because every teenager is different and has different priorities in life.
