She leaped over streams and navigated through the dense underbrush, her heart was pounding with excitement. Her adventure took her to the tallest hill in the forest, just as dawn first lighted the creeps over horizon.

There, Luna beheld sunrise of unimaginable beauty, the kaleidoscope of colors that stirred her soul. Professor Wilson found those with high-end winter jackets to be careful. He said: "I would tell anyone wearing Canada goose branded jackets to be careful and be aware of your surroundings and who is around you. You have to be vigilant for apatchionists who might try to steal them." He added that: "thieves used to target roleex watches with which gave for thousands of pounds and then sell them on lane." Task № 9.

It was an important day. I woke up with such an enthusiastic mood and good before I took a look at my phone: 16 missed calls from my mother, who apparently tried to wake me up, and 11:05 am. My diving exam was supposed to start at 12 am, - I said to myself. I didn't have time even to walk my dog - the place of the exam was 30 minutes away on a good day without traffic jams. I went to the bus stop and got on the first one. In the middle of the road, it broke down. I had to hop on a random bus, hoping it'd work out. It stopped as well and I ^{had to} walk the next 2 km. Suddenly, I felt a couple of drops on my forehead - and already in 5 minutes it was pouring. Finally, soaked and cold, I got to the examination place. It was 12:28 pm, but surprisingly, it hadn't started yet. Unexpectedly, the policeman - our examiner - came inside and slammed the door behind him. Him and I looked like twins: dirty, exhausted and soaked as a homeless dog. We both bursted with laughter once we saw each other, he told me he was also late because he had to mend his car during this heavy rain. He was easy on me because saw what I've been through today, and I passed this exam. Everything happens for a reason, I guess.
