About seventy-three percent of teens are on social networks. So social networks are an important part of life of many teenagers. Thirty-seven percent of ~~teenagers~~ these users send messages to friends every day. Social networks help to communicate with our friends. However, the average teen has ~~so~~ more than two ~~to~~ hundred friend in the Facebook so most of our Internet friends are not our friends in the life. Twenty-two percent of teenagers log on to Facebook over ten times per day. Almost a quarter of ^{such} users has an addiction. A quarter of Facebook users are under the age of ten. Perhaps, ~~it~~ children should spend more time in the real life to communicate and socialize. Only eight percent of American teens use Twitter. So it is not popular app among American teenagers.

The diagram presents that teenagers can't live without social networks.
