Task 1

1- The central character of the story was a boy. His name was Rohan and he was known for his ~~team~~ laziness.

2- The boy's Rohan habit was wasting of time. It hindered his progress.

3- When Mr. Gupta arrived and Rohan heard about it, he was interested in it, and as he was curious, he decided to meet him.

4- Mr. Gupta was found sitting under the tree.

5- Mr. Gupta said that time was a gift and ~~he~~ Rohan needed to value it.

6- There were a ~~lot~~ lot of lessons that Mr. Gupta has taught the villagers. For example, they needed to value every minute of their life, also they mustn't be lazy because the life is short and they won't be able to do everything they wanted to.

7- The life in the village was transformed incredibly because everyone started changing his or her life step by step and soon every villager will ~~appre~~ know the prize of the missed time.

8- The story tells us about the valuable time that we miss every day. Although we could spend it with our relatives or doing something important, we spend it doing nothing so our life is passing by.

9- Rohan's understanding of time has changed incredible over the years. As soon as he started thinking about what he would do ~~in~~ during next day, ~~his~~ he could a lot of tasks and his talents began to open.

10- The ultimate lesson that the story of Rohan and Mr. Gupta conveyed to everyone is that success comes to them who understands the value of time and to them who value every second of their life.

Task 7

If someone once told you that they hated living in big cities, there are numerous reasons to say so. Firstly, the hustle and bustle of big cities is really annoying and if you aren't used to it your mental health can be damaged. Secondly, in big cities the level of pollution is enormous because carbon dioxide that is produced by cars pollute the atmosphere that can cause serious health problems. So, she has all reasons to hate living there in cities.

Task 9

In our modern life an enormous part of it take social networks. According to the pie chart, the biggest part of teenagers use it and only 27 percent don't. That tells us that teens' life will be hard and even impossible without social networks. Also, we can see that 38 percent of teenagers send messages to their friends every day and the average teen has 201 Facebook friend. These statistics show us that nowadays teenagers chat mostly on the Internet so they go for a walk and hang out with their friends less; it can cause serious health damage.

Although, there are a lot of users on Facebook, 25 percent of them are kids. So, they get used to social networks from the early ages, and in the future it'll become a big part of their routine.

To prevent future increasing of networks popularity we must explain to our kids and teens how harmful social networks are.
