Task 9

The Day Everything Went Wrong (But Ended Right)

Once he woke up, my friend called George had a bad premonition and he was right.

Firstly, as soon as he left his house and tried to get in the car, the door refused to be open as it was glued. Had the climate been freezing, it would have been in the place. However, George was a resident of Hawaii so the case was beyond the normal.

Secondly, walking down the street on his way to the office, he was falling on his knees again and again since he didn't notice those tiny rocks and other litter on the path. Moreover, George started to be concerned as soon as he reached his destination - the office was empty and quiet. A series of such occasions were chasing him one after another. He would drop his mug and it would break into pieces or his pen would run out of ink. And last but not least, he couldn't manage his staff in the office as there were none of them.

Suddenly, everything clicked into place, he completely drew a blank what the date it was. His birthday is always celebrated with some kind of mischief from his friends and colleagues.

Finally, all his nearest and dearest turned up and started to sing for him.
