Task 7.

There are many reasons to have such an opinion. To start, big cities are a lot noisier than smaller ones. There is also the environmental factor: big cities are typically very polluted. Moreover, competition for great jobs is very big, so it can be a pain to find work unless your ~~proper~~ profession is rare and sought-for. Finally, the amount of people: for some it is stressful to be in a city with millions of inhabitants.

Task 8.

SOCIAL NETWORKS AND THEIR IMPACT

4
In the modern world, millions of teenagers use social networks every day. That on its own isn't concerning, but their impact is yet to be analyzed. Let's try to do that now.

First of all, we can see on the piechart that an overwhelming 73% of teens are on social networks, but only 37% send messages to friends every day. This is a ~~concern~~ concerning trend: although social networking was created to help us stay connected, teens don't see it that way.

Secondly, the diagram shows that the average teen has 201 Facebook friends. It is of no doubt that it is impossible to have so many friends in the offline world. Teens might think they have someone to rely on, when in reality they've never met most of their online friends.

In conclusion, social networking is quite an interesting phenomenon: ~~it~~ its purpose is to benefit humanity, but it ends up harming the young part of it.
