Task 9

One gloomy Monday morning, my alarm clock malfunctioned, setting off a chain reaction of mishaps. Rushing to make up for lost time, I spilled coffee on my ^{freshly} ~~spotted~~ brand T-shirt.

hastily grabbing my home keys, and I discovered that I discovered flat tire, a cruel irony on a day when every second counted.
In a desperate attempt to salvage the day, I hailed a cab, but I had left my wallet at home. The sympathetic taxi driver kindly accepted a promise of payment upon arrival at my school. However, the challenges persisted as the traffic transformed my usually brisk commute into a ~~top~~ labyrinth of delays.
Finally arriving at the school, I immediately sent email to my friends but I forgot code ~~any~~ notifying. Panic threatened to me, but my mom gave it to me, when I ^{phoned} called her.

As the day to close, I reflected on the unexpected twists. The morning's thanks led to UNF pre-sec address from the co-driver, and a message of good. I stumbled upon a different kind of success - a reminder that some times even when everything seems to go wrong the day can end right.

Topic 3

There has been a spike in thefts in the area of Glava and Magara factories, and it's becoming a matter of concern for local residents. Often this involves petty thefts and vandalism. A metropolitan police force is dealing with the situation and the criminals are causing costs of up to 2000$ not only damaging properties but also breaking into people's vehicles. Police officials deny any affiliation with a group called "Asirgam" or "Junior Vipers".
