The reasons are: It's too noisy outside.

It's difficult to sleep, because there's a lot of light outside. There's a very heavy traffic. You spend a lot of time, while you are driving somewhere.

The environment is really polluted. There's a lot of rubbish in streets.

All the places where you can spend your free time are ~~crowded~~ ~~of people~~ always packed.

It's dangerous, because there are a lot of thieves in big cities.

8 Task

This pie chart shows us that social networks are really important for teenagers. 37% of teens send messages to friends every day and 23% of teens are on social networks. And now it's normally because everyone has smartphones, and using social networks help us to understand popular trends, to communicate with people in a comfortable way. And I think chatting and need to relax by watching funny ^{videos} and reading books can be the reasons why 8% of American teens use twitter and 92% of teenagers log on to Facebook over 10 times per day. As for me it's strange that 25% of Facebook users are under the age of 10. They're very young and they have more ways to have fun. For example go to playgrounds. The average teen has 201 Facebook friends, it's OK sometimes if they don't even know and worry about who are their friends in reality. In my opinion, these numbers will grow, because more technologies will appear in our lives.
