Task 1.

1. A little boy, named Rohan. He was known for his laziness.
2. Procrastination, laziness and the habit of wasting time hindered his progress.
3. He was curious and wanted to see him.
4. He was sitting under a large tree.
5. He used an hourglass.
6. Time waits for no one; success comes to those who manage their time efficiently; to achieve your goals you have to break them down and focus on completing those small tasks one by one.
7. The villagers reevaluated the importance of time.
8. When shaping destinies, you are to break them down into and complete these smaller tasks without wasting time.
9. He pursued his goals successfully, but later he realised that time is not only meant for achievements. It was also crucial for him to spend time with his family.
10. Time is a precious gift, not a mere commodity.

Task 7.

When speaking about "big city life", she could highlight a few downsides. ^{point out}
Firstly, megapolis dwellers suffer from all sorts of pollution. This woman could highlight ^{take} air water and noise pollution.
Secondly, the traffic. If she is a ~~car owner~~ ^{car owner} owns a car, she knows that it might ^{take} eternity to reach your destination in peak hours.
Lastly, the psychological difficulties. She is probably tired of the pace of life and all the "hustle and bustle" so common for such places.

Task 8.

- The "explora" diagram shows daily activities for teenagers. It emphasises that using social networks is the most common pastime for them, as nothing else is featured.
- The overall involvement rate is 78%. In my opinion, so many teenagers use it them to chat with friends, because more than a half of them send messages every day.
- Meanwhile, not so many teens use social networks to get news. Only 8% use news-dedicated Twitter, whilst 25% of Facebook has a single-digit age. Not only the purpose, but also "name policy" define Facebook's popularity. Teens have more than two hundred friends with real names there.
- Every fifth teenager is addicted to social media. 22% of them show obvious signs of obsession, visiting Facebook 10 times a day. Sadly, news and chatting have become a drug of modern children.
- To my mind, this is an extremely frightening trend.
