Task 1.

Listening

- 1) The central character in the story was a boy named Rohan. He was known for his lazyness and wasting time.
- 2) The habit that hindered Rohan's progress was procrastinating.
- 3) Rohan was filled with curiosity upon hearing about Mr. Gupta's arrival.
- 4) Mr. Gupta was found on the large apple tree when Rohan approached him for guidance.
- 5) Mr. Gupta used an hourglass to symbolize the importance of time.
- 6) The villagers learnt that time is an actual treasure.
- 7) The village noticed how Rohan started organizing his daily routine, they watched him work on himself through days and weeks.

- 9) Rohan's understanding of time changed a lot: he started receiving remarkable achievements, using the time wisely and cherishing every passing moment.
- 8) The story emphasized that people can spend every moment of their life consciously and aim a variety of things.
- 10) The ultimate lesson was that the time is a limited resource and a precious gift which should be treasured.

Task 7.

A friend of yours once told you that she hated living in a big city. Apparently, the environment that she lived in were inconvenient and the climate was not suitable for her health. Besides, I'd assume that she used to live in a small cozy village and had a lot of friends there. I also think that the city that she lived in had not too many places to go, so she was simply bored there.

Teen social networking stats

We are given a diagram about Teen Social Network. Let's look at it.

Approximately 73% of teens are on social networks. The reason is that they use it to talk to their friends and share their life. Meanwhile, 34% of users text their friends every day. The rest spend time online to watch some content or do other activities. 8% of American teenagers use Twitter. Apparently the features of Twitter are not satisfying enough to be used by everyone. 22% of teens log on to Facebook over 10 times a day. I think they have a lot of friends there. Besides, the average teen has 201 Facebook friends. By the way, 25% of Facebook users are under the age of 10. The reason might be that there is a lot of content for kids.

In conclusion, it's worth saying that the given stats told us more about Social Networks in general.
