Вариант 2.

TASK 1.

Attention, deliberate, record.

a) Now I'm climbing a hill. I've already seen a waterfall and a forest. Anyway, I heard wonderful songs of birds and noticed many wild animals.

Well, I can't describe my emotions! The views are breathtaking. I feel so excited. I'll definitely visit this place one more time.

Besides, I have already taken many amazing photos on my camera. I have also made a tent nearby to spend a night there.

b) Well, I am really happy to have such experience. I have been dreaming about it since my childhood. The nature is so clean and the air is very fresh. I would like to stay here longer. I strongly recommend everyone to climb a hill one day.

TASK 3.

1. False. The word "greenwashing" became popular in the 1980s when people first began to understand that the world's environment was under threat.
2. True. Companies began to showcase their so-called "eco-friendly" practices and policies, often exaggerating or making false claims to attract customers, improve their image, and increase their profits.
3. Not given.
4. False. Not given.
5. True. This is called greenwashing, and it is very important for consumers, particularly young adults, to be aware of the practice.
6. False. A wonderful step towards meeting one of our main goals — to use only 100% recycled or other sustainably-sourced materials by 2030.

7. False. Most of ^{the} world's big companies now try to demonstrate that they are eco-friendly, and use recyclable packaging and green marketing slogans to show this.

8. True. By learning to recognize greenwashing, you can become a better consumer and encourage companies and governments to be more honest in their approach.

9. False. Companies began to showcase their so-called "eco-friendly" practices and policies, often exaggerating or making false claims to attract customers, improve their image, and increase their profits.

10. Not given.
