Task 4.

1) The message consisted of a cryptic job offer by some company, claiming to have worked on the latest video game of the year. Oliver always dreamt about a such once in a blue moon opportunity, and the advertised position would allow him to be in his element. As the final straw, they promised the pay to be a percentage of all revenue.

2) For a whole week he has been thinking about the email. But, by and large, his mind was forced into making a quick decision, due to the pathetic pay of the current job barely allowing Oliver to make ends meet. The recent pay cut by employer was performed in a desperate to stabilise company's economic crisis.

in a desperate attempt at fixing the economic crisis and stabilising company without having to lay off people.

3) Being pleasantly surprised by what he had seen and heard, despite the posh atmosphere, driver was reluctant to agree. He is still blaming himself for not accepting the job offer a week before, wishing he can have done all of this sooner, instead of ~~having~~ being taken advantage of on the previous work, while ~~being~~ cruelly treated and paid peanuts. For him it is a new life.

1) - a type of extravert person who enjoys discussing, spreading, or just hearing information to rumour about.

2) - intending to do some set of actions and being ready, about to do them.

3) - end an unpleasant argument with someone because you have fundamentally different points of view and can't convince each other.
