Paragraph 2:

At first, Clara didn't know what to do. She understood that if she had known about this programme before, she would ~~have~~ be able to make a decision ~~much~~ faster. Besides, Clara's emotional state hasn't been stable since ^{morning}. She couldn't turn a blind eye on invitation ^{that} and needed to decide what to do sooner or later. Moreover, Clara was probably at the back of one's mind as she was invited.

Paragraph 4:

Although Clara did great at her university, she didn't want to miss such opportunity anyway. ~~Despite~~ ^{despite thinking} ~~In spite of the fact that Clara thought~~ that organisers of the exchange programme had mistaken, she, being on the verge of declining the invitation, decided to try to become the only student to take part in it, and do ~~important~~ something in one go: gain ~~useful~~ knowledge abroad and visit her aunt's clothes shop "Hectic", which ~~wasn't located in the place where Clara lived~~. So she told everyone that she was ready for the programme.

(70)

Paragraph 6:

Eventually, Clara understood that the programme wasn't worth good relationships with classmates. ~~mates~~ She must have been less ambitious, ~~and~~ straightforward, and ^{must have} taken for granted the fact that she can't be better than anyone. Clara learned that it's ~~better~~ good to be rewarding, she will have got a job by the end of the year, and become successful, ^{anyway} as her father is a CEO of a large well-known company.
