Task 4.

Paragraph 2.

At first, Clara turned a blind eye on this programme but in the back of her mind she thought of it as a great opportunity to prove everyone she's more than a spoiled girl from a wealthy family. She knew that sooner or later her interest in the programme should have been either confirmed or denied. However, she couldn't decide on it.

Paragraph 4.

After Clara had found out what people at school thought of her, she was on the verge of doing something ~~st~~ she hadn't thought through. She confirmed her wish to compete for the exchange programme in one go. Clara did want to take that opportunity but it felt hectic. She knew that people at school would probably judge her for taking this opportunity from someone less fortunate and was right about it.

Task 4.

Paragraph 6.

Clara heard all ~~very~~ kinds of things about her. "She must have done it for attention! Why would she need this programme at all?" - someone said in the cafeteria. But Clara was a pretty straightforward person, so she decided not to wait for more rumours but to confront people. She delivered a speech, in which she told that if she would have had the honour to take part in this programme, she wouldn't have taken a second of it for granted because it would be an achievement rewarding her for the hard work.

Task 7.

1. Galileo Galilei invented the telescope.
2. Stephen Hawking didn't carry out laboratory experiments as he was a theoretical physicist.
3. Louis Pasteur didn't discover penicillin.
4. Her electronic computer wasn't successful.
5. He discovered penicillin by mistake, when he forgot to wash a petri dish.
