Paragraph 2.

Slightly alerted by an ~~an~~ unwanted invitation, Clara decides to turn a blind eye on the deal. The first few hours after the invitation go swimmingly for Clara, her peace disrupted only by her classmates' occasional chatter of once-in-a-lifetime opportunities. And yet, by the evening, at the back of her mind a worrying thought started brewing: sooner or later, a decision has to be made.

Paragraph 4

Clara spent the second day guessing whether applying to the exchange programme was worth it. She was on the verge of breaking down when something struck her. Mere hours before the deadline she answered the call and, in a hectic pace, submitted the form and completed the entry test in one go. Little did she know that this impulsive decision would have some unfortunate consequences.

Paragraph 6.

Clara wondered: what would have happened must she not had ~~agreed~~ decided to follow through? She took the admiration of classmates and the straightforward study process for granted. She will have to adjust to the new environment. The promises of the rewarding experiences felt barely comforting. In spite of it all, Clara left her school in high hopes, eager to pursue the opportunity to study and explore Russia.
