Task 4.

Paragraph 2.

The email ~~from Oliver's professor~~ suggested taking part in ~~the~~ projects contest ~~as a leader~~ that guaranteed the winner to receive a grant, (for ~~putting~~ ^{it} ~~the~~ ~~planned~~ ~~into~~ ~~life~~). Oliver was in two minds about this, ~~so~~ ^{when} his dad tapped him on his shoulder, "Look, son, such opportunities ^{arise} come up once in a blue moon! Besides, you'd be in your element at once! I had been in that situation. If I hadn't taken the plunge, I wouldn't have been where I'm now." However, Oliver still hesitated. ^{It} ~~it~~ ^{this} wasn't the final straw for Oliver's decision.

Paragraph 4.

All ~~hi~~ For many years he has been doing the same things over and over again. ~~The job~~ By and large, the job allowed Oliver to make ~~his~~ ends meet, and he was content with the work and stability. Yet, not only did he crave change in the back of his mind but also thought he was pathetic for not doing anything about it at all.

Paragraph 6.

At first, the team members were reluctant to accept each other's ideas. "You're always using the wrong tools!" they hissed at each other. "This concept is posh!" they uttered. Oliver ~~start~~ knew he could have done better ~~as a leader~~. With time, he managed to take advantage of the diversity of ideas and find a perfect solution. Finally, the project won the contest. However, the grant wasn't the main prize. Oliver's new personality and skills were.
