Task 4

2) Though such once-in-a-lifetime chance has been offered to her, Clara decided to turn a blind eye on it. However, she still subconsciously kept it at the back of her mind. If she hadn't already secured a spot at her future internship, she would jump at the chance that very second. Little did she know that sooner or later the idea would grow on her even more.

4) Thinking about it later, Clara acknowledged those words had provoked her competitive nature. It felt hectic so at first, she wasn't sure about her decision but eventually ~~made it~~ ~~as~~ firmly said, 'I do want to prove I'm the best'. Clara did it in one go: flattered her ego and applied for the programme. Yet it led her to the state of being on the verge of a breakdown.

⑥ Obviously, she anticipated receiving ~~some~~ side eyes from peers, could take it for granted, but not such ~~ominous~~ frightening straight forward backlash. Now being the best didn't feel rewarding but Clara wasn't touched and wouldn't step down. Later she tried to cheer herself up thinking people must have been jealous. Anyways, she will have arrived abroad while the school will still call her names for fulfilling own ambitions.
