Par. 2: The email contained an offer for a job as an engineer in the NASA project. It was explained that the company wanted to hire new specialists. NASA sent people to watch how students work at Oliver's university, and then for the final straw they have chosen some people they liked. (au. creg. comp.)

(инт. н.о.а)

"If I hadn't learned physics, I wouldn't have got such an opportunity that appears once in a blue moon", - thought the lucky man.

~~Par. 4: He was thinking about the responsibility that he'd have to take. He liked his stable life, but underpaid job that he has been doing for years~~

Par. 4: He was thinking about the responsibility that he'd have to take. "I like my stable life, but underpaid job that I've been doing for years hardly helps me to make ends meet," - doubted he. Not only was the offer a great way to get a payrise, but it was also a chance to find ~~friends~~ new friends. There were more positive aspects than disadvantages, so Oliver was pathetic with his decision.

Par. 6: During the meeting ~~even~~ the man understood: ~~that~~ ~~he should~~ "I should have looked at my life from the different angle many years ago!*" ~~Everybody is always~~ the team was really friendly and open-minded, not like him. "Everybody is always thinking that I'm boring" - implied Oliver, and his ~~his~~ ^{future} colleagues decided to help him and show their post lives. They told him to take an advantage of every opportunity, and he did so - became a part of the team.
