Task 4.

Paragraph 2: Had he scrolled past this email, he would have never seen the opportunity to finally be in his element while working. Moreover, the argument he had had with his boss the day before seemed to be the final straw. In the email Oliver was offered work with a team of game developers he looked up to, an opportunity you get once in a blue moon.

Paragraph 4: Rarely was Oliver as anxious. "I've been struggling to make ends meet for the last ^{few} months. Also, I feel pathetic because of the way I'm being treated at work," he thought to himself. By and large, his life was rather ordinary, but nobody about Oliver's inner struggles. The night had been maddeningly long, and when it was time to wake up, Oliver felt cornered.

Paragraph 6: ~~He felt reluctant to answer whether he wanted to join the project or not. "I am tired of being taken advantage of," he thought. "Why am I always trying to steer clear of a lucky break?"~~ Sitting in a posh chair in front of his potential colleagues, Oliver recollected his composure. The answer was now definite. "Yes," ~~he~~ said Oliver and smiled, embracing the wind of change.
