Paragraph 2.

Clara was about to turn a blind eye on the programme. She never applied, why would she care? But there was something at the back of her mind.

Something, that made her think about this opportunity a little longer. There was pretty enough time to discuss it in your head from several corners. However, Clara decided to put all these thoughts aside - she will get here back sooner or later.

Paragraph 4.

Clara was on the verge of rage. But she managed to calm herself down. Step aside? Safe? If she worked hard all past years creating a clever image of herself, that doesn't mean she will decline such programme this easily. She applied for an exchange in one go. Even if this was a heetic, emotional decision. After all, her name had been added not by just an accident, right?

Paragraph 6.

Clara came up with a thought that she must thinked more before taking an action and make such a selfish decision. She just took this opportunity for granted, not even talking about this with classmates - maybe someone spent years to get ready for this programme. Clara was ~~straight forward~~ straight forward when talked to classmates. Weeks of their distant attitude was hell. The acceptance of her apology was more rewarding than any exchange.
