Task 4.

Paragraph 2. On one hand, if Oliver had never opened his previous email, he would not have even got his current position. But on the other hand, he had been afraid of trying new things ever since he was a kid. He needed to be in his element. However, the feeling of missing out on great opportunities just because he could not get out of his own comfort zone was the last straw to opening the email.

Paragraph 4. If he accepted the offer, he would also earn three times what he gets now. The financial aspect was really important to Oliver since he has been struggling for the whole year to make ends meet. The last time he had his first day at work he did feel especially pathetic. That is why a conference with a team of practically strangers sounded frightening to him.

Paragraph 6. Today, Oliver is one of the greatest specialists in his field. Two years ago he was reluctant about joining the project. If only someone could tell that old version of him that it will change his life for the better and he should take advantage of it. Some days, Oliver is thinking of punching that one posh colleague in the face but otherwise, he is finally happy.
