Task 4.

1. Galilei was the inventor of the telescope, further improved by Kopernik.

2. Hawking did not carry out laboratory experiments on radioactive elements due to his poor health.

3. Louis Pasteur didn't discover penicillin, as far as I'm concerned. Penicillin was discovered by Alexander Fleming.

4. There was no fully functioning electronic computer tested by Ada. (~~However, she did build a machine, that which was similar in to an electronic computer.~~)

5. Penicillin was discovered due to an experiment on growth of ~~with~~ bacteria colonies.

Task 4.

Paragraph 2.

Now, if it had not been for the (~~wait~~) confirmation period being so short, Clara would have turned a blind eye. If it was not for her indecisiveness, the message would not be at the back of her mind. (~~Besides, sooner or later~~) (~~consequently~~) some ~~the~~ exchange programmes have (~~be~~) been searched by Clara, (~~best~~) hence sooner or later she would be applying for one of them. ~~However~~ However, she was not sure she would meet all the requirements for such a programme.

Paragraph 4.

That information was an eye-opener. Clara was on the verge of declining the offer due to her lack of confidence, but as she heard ~~the~~ ^{her} class mates gossiping about her stepping aside, she realised that she did want to accept it. ~~Moreover, (if others believed in her)~~ she could prove herself worthy of success, that she had dreamt of ^{long} before ~~starting~~ starting school. In a hectic rush ^{out} she (~~confirmed her interest and~~) filled ~~everything~~ ~~(the documents)~~ in one go. (~~She did not think about the consequences.~~ ~~she was about to face.~~)

Paragraph 6.

However, soon a letter informing her ~~she~~ of being selected for the programme arrived. All that she had gone through (~~the receiving of~~ ~~she got~~ ~~since~~ ~~that~~ ~~message~~) finally felt rewarding. Clara moved to a different ^{Italy} ~~country~~ and turned more straight forward about her intentions. It will have been 6 months since what must have been fate happened and Clara was added to that group. She was glad she seized the opportunity, not taking her success for granted.
