Paragraph 2

The email was from an amateur team of biologists who ~~want~~ wanted to start an ~~independent~~ independent project in the Alps. We had read one of your studies, have been extremely impressed, and would be honoured if you were in our element. The final straw was the mentioning at the end: "if we succeed, our project will be on BBC. ~~Such~~ Such chances happen once in a blue moon, don't miss it!"

Paragraph 4

Never has Oliver been thinking about getting

Such offer. By and large, his current job was sort of pathetic. Almost no career growth, low payment. After a few decades of working like this, he probably wouldn't even be able to make ends meet. And here was this, never known before, new option. Going for a meeting with this team. Just a meeting. That wouldn't even mean he'd join them. Right?..

Paragraph 6

Oliver was sitting in that office, listening to his potential future colleagues and thinking a lot. About how he's always being so posh and reluctant about his career, his life. How he's never able to take advantage of anything and actually get somewhere, "I can't believe I missed so many opportunities in my life", he suddenly said out loud. "You ~~guy~~ guys have opened my eyes. Of course, I'll join you."

Task 5.
