Task 4. (Paragraph 2) Apparently, Oliver had been chosen as a participant in an ~~scientific~~ experiment. If he agreed to join it, he would have to develop amnesia. His behaviour would be analysed by the neuroscientists. He would receive ten million dollars as a compensation. That was the final straw to start considering this offer. Besides, as a forgetful person, Oliver would be in his element. This crazy opportunity appears once in a blue moon.

(Paragraph 4) He decided to reply to that email. He felt pathetic. Oliver never thought he was so greedy. By and large, it was not like he needed to make ends meet. He just wanted to be loaded. Little did he know they already had a response prepared.

"Hello, Oliver! We have been waiting to invite you to our project meeting! We will send you the address in ten minutes."

(Paragraph 6) He felt reluctant to stay there any longer. Oliver thought to himself, "What am I doing here?! I am not going to let these with posh accent to take advantage of my brain!". He could have realised it sooner, but alas. He ran away from there while the scientists were distracted by the idle chat. After all, his memories had more value than money.

Task 5. 1) An overly curious and talkative individual who is extremely interested in gossip.

2) To be ready and willing to take action ~~and~~ or make a decision.

3) A situation in which the opposing parties mutually refuse to stop their dispute.
