Paragraph 2

Clara got perplexed. The thoughts about the ~~the~~ programme was at the back of her mind. If she wasn't a promising student, she wouldn't have received this offer. The girl turned a blind eye to other candidates from her school. She would only notice messages "the offer has been accepted" from other applicants. Making this decision seemed a daunting prospect, but sooner or later she would have to answer.

Paragraph 4 ^{hectic remark}

This ~~remark~~ ^{hectic remark} made the girl reconsider her decision, since she was already on the verge of accepting it. She did believe she deserved it, but blocking opportunities from other students was utterly unacceptable. However, the desire of being chosen had grown stronger by this moment, so she sighed and sent the confirmation of her participation in one go, leaving no room for hesitation.

Paragraph 6

The girl was in deep regret, already thinking that she must have made a mistake. The programme was no longer rewarding and didn't appear to be a straightforward way to success. By the end of this week she will have completed the introduction part of it, entering new life. This way Clara had learnt the lesson to never take what she had for granted and control her ego.
